Learning International Financial Management

ISI is offering classes, on International Financial Management, including management of the implementation, designing the information reporting structures and tables and transactions processing for routine and periodic general ledger, accounts payable and accounts receivable activities.

Classes are geared to three levels:

First, for senior financial management involved in designing the reporting structure to meet the strategic goals of the organization and responsible for implementation.

Second, for the finance department personnel responsible for building and maintaining the system reporting requirements tables and interface requirements.

Third, for accounting department staff responsible for general ledger, accounts payable and accounts receivable transaction processing.

Class will consist of both instructional and hands on exercises to demonstrate and reinforce learning of the application features and flexibility. Instruction on standard IFM structure and requirements will be coupled with the specific training geared to the information and reporting needs of the business.

The classes are divided as noted above and are scheduled to cover four days, two days for the overview and structural design and two days for transaction processing. The classes can be tailored to meet the customer needs.
